Market Commentary

Q4-2025 Market Review

Here is your professional market commentary for Q4-2025:

Portfolio Impact

Our diversified portfolio demonstrated strong relative performance this quarter, generating a return of +2.70%, thereby outperforming the S&P 500 by 70 basis points. This outperformance was significantly bolstered by our strategic allocation to high-quality equities, particularly robust contributions from holdings like Johnson & Johnson (JNJ), which surged +12.2%, and Apple (AAPL) with a +6.2% gain, aligning with the broader market's shift towards established leaders. While our fixed income allocations, including positions such as BND (+0.6%) and VGIT (+0.8%), provided essential portfolio stability and modest positive returns, they acted as a slight drag on overall outperformance compared to the equity components.

Outlook & Positioning

Global equity markets delivered a generally positive, albeit nuanced, performance in the fourth quarter of 2025. The S&P 500 Index advanced by +2.00%, driven primarily by strength in more defensive and value-oriented sectors, with Healthcare leading significantly at +8.8%, followed by Materials at +4.5% and Financials at +3.2%. Conversely, Real Estate lagged with a -3.1% decline, and Consumer Discretionary experienced a -1.6% contraction, suggesting investor caution regarding interest rate sensitivity and discretionary spending. International developed markets, as represented by the MSCI EAFE Index, notably outperformed U.S. large-caps, returning a robust +5.0%, potentially benefiting from a more favorable currency environment and improving global economic sentiment independent of U.S. Federal Reserve policy, which maintained a watchful stance on inflation throughout the quarter.

Financial Planning Notes

Planning Recommendations

Here are the concise planning recommendations for Sarah Mitchell: Sarah remains well on track to achieve her retirement goals. Current projections indicate a healthy 15% surplus over her target income, providing significant flexibility. To maintain this strong trajectory, continue maximizing your 401(k) contributions this year. Consider directing any additional savings into a Roth IRA or taxable investment account for further growth and tax diversification. We recommend a portfolio rebalance to ensure alignment with your target asset allocation and risk tolerance. Let's also schedule a comprehensive review of your estate plan and beneficiary designations next quarter.

2026 Action Items

- Fund 2026 Roth IRA contributions for both spouses (up to $7,000 each) as early as possible in January to maximize tax-free compounding.
- Review beneficiary designations on all retirement accounts and life insurance policies.
- Confirm withholding elections are appropriate following the 2025 tax return.

Next Review

Your next scheduled quarterly review meeting is tentatively set for mid-June 2026.
